ROMANCE OF A DISHONEST DOG.

In the rogues' gallery in the New Orleans Police Department there is the picture of "Mollie Waterman and her dog." Mollie was no thief. She was never known to steal anything in her life, and yet she was classed among thieves, because her dog had the habit of stealing. Mollie would go into a store and examine goods, jewelry, etc., and the dog was always at her side. She had a way of telling the dog just what she wanted out of the store, and then she went out, and the dog hung around. When the shopman's back was turned the dog never failed to lay his teeth on the very article that Mollie wanted. He punctually brought it to his mistress at her rooms. Sometimes the dog took little things that he thought Mollie might want, without any hint from her. Mollie and her dog had a perfect understanding, worked together for several years, and were very dear friends, as events proved. One day the dog was caught stealing. Mollie flew to his rescue, and she examined the dog and actually accused herself of being the thief. The police took her at her word. She said she was willing to do all the suffering, and pay the penalty, but begged her jailors to spare the dog. The jailors had the photograph of Mollie Waterman and dog taken and hung up among the rogues. They then told her the dog had to die without judge or jury. She prayed the inexorable police to take her life, but spare the dog's. They would not listen to her appeal, and, killing the dog before her eyes, they hung the bleeding carcass into her cell and looked her up. Next morning Mollie Waterman was found dead in her cell, with the dog in her arms. There was an instance of devotion. That picture is worthy of a better place than a police-office rogues' gallery. Mr. Bergh ought to look after it.—[Missouri Republican.]

The Lafayette, Ind., Courier says: One of the good signs of the times is the increased interest manifested by the people in the cause of temperance. It is a notable fact that there is a marked diminution of intemperance among the laboring people, and that they are learning that they must add to their proverbial industry the virtues of temperance and economy if they would increase their worldly prosperity. During the recent temperance excitement in this State, the Catholics and Irish members of the church took an active part on the side of sobriety.

The Indianapolis State Journal is owned by Senator Oliver P. Morton, and is his organ. It has recently heard something of a drop in that State, or is getting crazy. This is what it says about the salary grab: "It is a notable fact that there is a marked diminution of intemperance among the laboring people, and that they are learning that they must add to their proverbial industry the virtues of temperance and economy if they would increase their worldly prosperity. During the recent temperance excitement in this State, the Catholics and Irish members of the church took an active part on the side of sobriety."

The prohibiting liquor law in Massachusetts sometimes gives rise to comic as well as tragic incidents, as at Holyoke the other day, when a State Constable, after an exciting chase, overhauled a truckman and seized upon the beer barrel in his wagon, only to discover that its contents were swill instead of lager.

The Coffeyville (Kansas) Courier recommends itself after this fashion: "The Courier is printed nearer the scene of the late Bender horror than any other newspaper. Those wishing to subscribe for a good live newspaper should make a note of this fact."

A Long Branch hotel-keeper advertises that place as "the summer capital of the nation." The fact is important to people having business with the Government: Washington is only the winter watering place—Long Branch the summer capital.

It is useless for physicians to argue against short-sleeved dresses. The Constitution of the United States says that the right to bear arms shall not be interfered with.

When a chap marries a Texas widow he delicately mentions his good luck by inserting in the marriage notice that the wedding took place at the "bride's beautiful home."

A Sealers' Michigan woman threw her corpse over her husband, and then set fire to him; when he came home from the "Masons" the other night.

Ida Lewis, the light-house heroine, has left her husband and again paddles her own canoe.

Mrs. Lyster, of Indiana, was lately buried in her linen wedding garments, which she spun, wove and wore 73 years ago.

Mrs. Abraham Lincoln is at St. Catharines, Canada, where she will pass the summer.

Miss Leo Hudson ordered a bronze horse to be put up over her grave.
